

WISH LIST By Heather Madden

Horn, historically used for necessities like cups and combs, today has achieved luxury status because of its rich tones and translucent beauty. "It's almost magical – you don't know what it will look like until it is polished," said Sandra Jordan, a Healdsburg designer who features a wide array of Peruvian-made objects fashioned from retrieved horn. It's easy to be thankful for such a durable, elegant and versatile cornucopia of treasures.
